

INTRODUCTION

Many people believe that they have been made to rule or dominate others.

People must necessarily live and work under them, and they must rule in all matters. Nobody has a better and brighter idea than them. When their conscience even proves them wrong, they still insist with their puffed up ego, that they are right, and must be allowed to have their way.

These kinds of people are found in every home, workplaces, public institutions, sports and any other professions. When they finally realized that they are wrong, then they go back on the attack and do everything possible to punish those who wanted to show them the way. They must find all allegations to negate the better alternative that has been offered them, and they make every frantic effort to remove the person who points the right path to them. To the haughty and internally bruised, the one showing the right way is a trouble-maker. That trouble-maker must be removed to make way for him that must rule, lead and dominate.

Often, it becomes a terrible fight until finally, they get consumed in their shame, pride, and folly. The dominance of the intellect doesn't permit the man of today to be submissive. He cannot learn in silence. He must rule and dominate his environment and must control things and people around him. After all, the Bible told him that he must have dominion over his environment. So, as he wrongly construes the Word of God, so it has been experienced over thousands of years.

This fosters envy, and he tries to bring down those who have quietly and naturally developed their abilities over the years. He feels he has been let down by those natural abilities of others. He sees them as a source of threat to his weaknesses. He feels threatened by the good manners and talents of the people he doesn't believe could do something better than him. Thus, he must necessarily do something to correct his inefficiency, but not going back to learn it the hard way. For he thought he would be too late for him. Others would have by-passed him. So, he must rather prevent them from rising above him. That is the shortest and surest way, he thinks.

With morbid animosity, hatred, and envy, he must crush all those who try to stand in his way. Standing on his way here means that his inefficiency has been exposed to the light, and he cannot stand the shame of going back to start it all over. He must, therefore, cover it up through his dominance and ill-treatment of others so that he can still be held in high esteem.

So, the man of today is not normal. Overzealousness has misled him into an outrage posturing. He spread around troubles and ruins wherever he finds himself, thereby becoming a distasteful being in the sight of his fellowmen and God.

If only he could learn in humility. If only he could look into himself. If only he could listen to his inner voice which is strengthened by his intuitive perception. If only he could address his own inefficiencies, he would have seen that the road to success is not as difficult as he thinks. That God grants salvation to the humble and the meek, and uplift them at the appropriate hour. However, that appropriate hour is what many cannot wait for.

Man of today must learn in humility under the Laws of this Creation. Without this, nothing can be offered him in his current state. God shall not lower His standards to the level of the man in order to save them. For this reason, many are already counted as lost unless they do something urgently.

That something which is urgently needed lies in humility -- Humility in the knowledge of the Primordial Law of this Creation. Submit yourself to the Primordial Laws of this Creation. The whole Creation demonstrates these Laws in perfect simplicity. And that it shall take you only a simple thought, and a simple mind of knowing them. Greatness lies in simplicity.

You will know how God has ordered things within this Creation, how the perfect Love and Justice of God are woven into Creation! You would benefit from the numerous helps that Creation offers you. And like scales falling from your eyes, you will witness one miracle after another! You will, then, not carry within you envy against your neighbor.

One often hears of the global warming. The incessant weather changes, flooding, drying up of water bodies, melting of the glaciers, dams breaking and causing flooding to its surroundings, famine – and the more severe forms; earthquakes, storms, tornadoes, typhoons, tsunamis, and volcanoes. We watch these in trepidation every now and then such that it is only the ostrich that would dismiss them that our earth is not under severe transmutation.

The earth has actually dislodged itself from its terrestrial and spiritual orbit after thousands of years of mankind's evil volition and wrongdoings. Its position has been diverted from the direct radiation of the Light of God through our evils on earth. The earth actually almost lost its course of transition to the hand of the darkness as a result. And therefore, it would only take the strong Arm of God to redeem it! With this, the man of today has sentenced himself to be wiped out from the surface of this Creation.

The only thing that can save him is the thorough knowledge of this Creation. And by this, he must know the Divine Laws that govern this Creation. The only thing that would save him from the effervescent of the Judgement.
