

Mottos in this book that should be noted

When small trees are planted,
Fencing, watering, weeding out old roots,
Removing insects and clearing webs,
Must certainly be done always.

Patimokkha, Indriya, Ajiva,
And Paccaya,
Are four types of sīla.

Sīla and fencing, are simply alike.
Knowledge and watering, are simply alike.
Discussion and weeding, are simply alike.
Samatha and insect-clearing, are simply alike.

When moha arises, it shall be abandoned by reflecting
Buddha's attributes.
When dosa arises, it shall be abandoned by radiating mettā.

Towards the one who should not be loved,
To opposite sex, dearly loved one
Neutral person and enemy,
Mettā should not be developed first.

When lobha arises, it shall be abandoned by contemplating asubha.
When māna arises, it shall be abandoned by recollecting death.

Vipassanā and web-removing, are simply alike.
